Written by Dave Pace
Wednesday, 27 June 2012 07:17

Greetings mutants!

I am back to bring you the week in indie horror news as I see it, here in the second instalment of the weekly “Chunks of Flesh” series. As always, readers are invited to interact with me and let me know what is going on out there in the big wild world – dave.pace@fangoria.com . We are living on the cusp of the next big indie renaissance and FANGORIA is here to navigate through it all.

Enough of my gibberish, on with the news!

• I know I mentioned this last week but it really deserves attention again: the Toronto After Dark Film Festival launches the first of their Summer Screenings series June 27th in Toronto at the newly refurbished Bloor Hot Docs Cinema. The first double bill up for consideration is Cuban zombie flick JUAN OF THE DEAD and tense haunted house piece THE PACT. I’m going to be attending, and frankly, so should anyone else in the Toronto area who is remotely interested in what is cool in horror. Toronto After Dark has firmly established itself as being on the pulse of what is great in genre entertainment, so come out and be a part of the fun.

{youtube}QvD2Ij54SA4{/youtube}

{youtube}F1amGFXpgIQ{/youtube}

Full details including showtimes, ticket prices and other awesome goodies at the official Toronto After Dark website .

THANATOMORPHOSE