Written by Allan Dart
Tuesday, 23 March 2010 12:19

A manufacturer of movie, music, sports and television collectibles, NECA has produced some top-notch horror toys and apparel over the years. A NIGHTMARE ON ELM STREET, FRIDAY THE 13TH and HELLRAISER are just a few of the fright franchises they've licensed, and now their Cult Classics: TERMINATOR 2: Series 3 is available for preorders. Read on for more info and pics!

Hitting shelves in May, NECA's new series is made up of four figures: two of Arnold Schwarzenegger as the T-800, and two of Robert Patrick's T-1000. Here's the rundown with pictures below:

T-800 Battle Across Time

This brand new version of the T-800 comes courtesy of the popular T2-3D movie attraction at Universal Studios theme parks. This figure is fully poseable and comes with a shotgun and plasma rifle. Articulation includes ball-jointed neck, shoulders, elbows, wrists and swivel waist.

T-800 Steel Mill

It's the last scene of the movie and everyone's a little worse for wear. This T-800 has been back and forth fighting the T-1000 all day, and by the time they get to the Steel Mill, it shows. Gonna need some more skin there, buddy. Figure comes with a pistol and grenade launcher, and articulation including a ball-jointed neck, shoulders, elbows, wrists and swivel waist.

T-1000 Galleria

Here is the T-1000 as he first appears in his police uniform pursuing John Connor in the shopping mall. He boasts a whopping five interchangeable hands and a pistol. Also the heads, hands and forearms can be interchanged between this figure and the battle damaged Pescadero version to create your own unique T-1000.

T-1000 Pescadero

This T-1000 shows the damage he endures when he first meets up with the T-800 in the Pescadero Hospital. The highly detailed figure features bullet wounds, hook arms and two different heads: an exploded head after taking a shotgun blast, and a split head as he forms back together. Also the heads, hands and forearms can be interchanged between this figure and the less blown-to-bits Galleria T-1000 to create your own unique version.