In the 21st episode, Fright Bytes brings you Part Two of the Shock Stock convention in London, Ontario, featuring talks with: Geretta Geretta (DEMONS, RATS, SWEETIECAKES), Joe Pilato (DAY OF THE DEAD, DAWN OF THE DEAD, PULP FICTION), artist Gary Pullin (GHOULISH GARY) and Joanna Angel (BURNINGANGEL.COM, pornographic film starlet).

Shock Stock caters to guests that don't always frequent the circuit, bringing the likes of Claudio Simonetti, Bobby Rhodes, Dyanne "Ilsa" Thorne, and Fred "The Hammer" Williamson.

If you missed Shock Stock this year, you should be getting on your plans for next (it's going to be even better—Fright Bytes was given the scoop on a possible guest for 2013, and trust us, you will be traveling to see this one), and making up for lost time by checking out Fright Bytes' complete coverage here .

Also in this episode, hosts Lianne Spiderbaby and Steve Mac give you an inside look behind-the-scenes of the convention, featuring some amazing photographs by FANGORIA photographer and scribe, David Goodfellow, as well as the drive into London, Ontario, the concert that Joanna Angel was banned from stripping at (the cops shut down her strip tease, see what she has to say about it below) and a few other treats!

Fright Bytes, of course, has more episodes on the way, with horror jewelry submitted by feminist horror filmmaker Tonjia Atomic, a review of Tim Burton's DARK SHADOWS, as well as a special sci-fi episode featuring an introduction by FANGORIA award-winning director Brian Clement for the release of Ridley Soctt's PROMETHEUS! Stay Tuned!

{youtube}ZpUc4j9SHPs{/youtube}