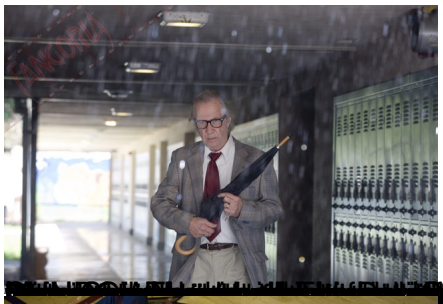
You don’t want to get stuck in DETENTION in SABRETOOTH/CHILDREN OF THE CORN III director James D.R. Hickox’s new horror thriller about all the things wrong with staying after school. The film, not to be confused with the recent same-titled Sony acquisition, hits DVD this month from American World Pictures and Take 2 Releasing. This bloody DETENTION stars David Carradine (as the boozy high school principal) in one of his last roles. Check out comments from star and producer Alexa Jago, as well as exclusive photos, below the jump.

When a group of high school students are abandoned and trapped in detention after their gym teacher disappears, they discover something else staying after class with them…and it’s not human. But once the students escape from their classroom prison, seeking refuge from ghosts is the least of their problems when it’s the school itself that is the most dangerous. Besides Carradine, DETENTION features TRUE BLOOD’s Preston Jones, NINJA CHEERLEADERS’ Maitland McConnell and Zelda Williams (daughter of Robin). “I had been looking for a script that combined THE BREAKFAST CLUB with THE GRUDGE,” says actress/producer Jago. “I have always been a fan of surprise endings like SIXTH SENSE and THE OTHERS, whilst John Stienfield, my partner in New Horizon Pictures, loved coming of age and frightening stories. After having looked for the perfect script for a while, John decided to come up with his own idea, and with our other producer Mike Muscal, came up with the outline for DETENTION. A theme that has always horrified me is being trapped, a claustrophobic situation, and we wanted people to feel that these kids were trapped in the school and that there was no way out.”



[redacted]

[redacted]

[redacted]

[redacted]