Those mavens of the macabre at Monsterverse Entertainment (responsible for the acclaimed BELA LUGOSI'S TALES FROM THE GRAVE) are gearing up to release an all new series filled with bloody terror this fall entitled FLESH AND BLOOD. Fango is happy to share an exclusive first look at the cover art!

A new series of graphic novels from Robert Tinnell and illustrated by Neil D. Vokes, FLESH AND BLOOD Volume One "begins with the bloody destruction of the legendary vampire, the darkly seductive Carmilla. Her death ignites an epic firestorm of events that draws the greatest icons of Gothic horror into battle across the lush backdrop of 19th century Europe. At the center of this ghastly conflict Baron Victor Frankenstein is forced to merge his diabolical scientific prowess with the black arts of a terrifying supernatural world. This unholy war between light and darkness will not be measured in months or years but across centuries of horror and devastation until one force reigns triumphant. Vampires, werewolves and scientific monsters are unleashed like nothing seen before in film, comics or literature."

In harking back to the monsters of olde we all hold dear, Monsterverse and their line of books have found serious praise and fans in Fango, and the likes of Joe Dante, John Landis and Rick Baker (who created the cover of August's BELA LUGOSI'S TALES FROM THE GRAVE #2. Check it here ). It's easy to see why.

Tinnell, Monsterverse publisher Kerry Gammill and writer Sam Park and many, many more will be on hand at San Diego Comic-Con this Friday at the publisher's panel (5-6 p.m in Room 9). FLESH AND BLOOD hits this October.
